Courtesy of a pottery barn when it comes to mixing with impressive printsm interiors, you'd be hard off finding someone better than Brooklyn-based textile designer and artist Rebecca Atwood. Pottery Barn just tapped Atwood to create a hilarious collection of patterned bedding, wallpaper, and home decoration accessories, including slow pillows and frame artwork that are meant to be mixed and matched to the content of your mind. Patterns are explainive and personal, so they're a great tool for telling stories at home, says Atwood. For the collaboration, the designer turned to nature for inspiration, and she aimed for each piece to feel classic, but still to be informed by the way people decorate today. When I chatted to the pottery barn, I always said I wanted to make my house happy and calm. Atwood explains. We all agreed we wanted it, so that's the feeling I created the pattern. For me, this meant asking the natural world for texture references, such as soft wavy waves waving on the surface of the lake when it rains, fields of flowers, sedimentary layers of rock, etc. I added a small texture print and rounded it up from colorful stripes to statement florals, and there's something for design enthusiasts. In addition, in a true pottery barn way, many of the items in the collection are affordable, with a set of four cotton napkins starting at just $32, pillows starting at $49.50 and temporary wallpaper of 2'x8' selling for $85. We also have organic cotton towels and creative new product categories. Before I started my line, I worked with many different retailers at all levels of the market, but I always enjoyed the process of designing for different customers, price ranges and product categories, says Atwood. It was really great to do it through the lens of my aesthetic for pottery barn customers. This summer, Sherwin Williams introduced high-end emerald interiors and exterior paints to broaden environmentally friendly products, expand environmentally friendly products, and offer new products. The company, which won the EPA's prestigious Presidential Green Chemistry Award in 2011, is beauty, washability and sustainability of its new zero-VOC line. The finish has built-in antimicrobial properties that release a small number of odors during or after application and inhibit mold and mold growth on the paint. Interior paints also received indoor air quality certification from GreenGuard, a third-party nonprofit that meets strict chemical emission limits and contributes to healthier indoor air. Perfect for weekend DIY projects, emerald interiors and exterior paints are self-priming that provides smoothnessEven coverage in 1-2 coats depending on the surface. The paint dries quickly and cleans up easily with soap and lukewarm water. Best of all, the company favors the brand with a lifetime warranty. Sherwin Williams has always been at the forefront of innovation, says Steve Rennew, the company's vice president of product innovation. People are looking for high hides, laundry, long-term, eco-friendly paints, and emeralds offer them in every way. In addition to the emerald products currently in store, Sherwin Williams has deployed the new ColorCast Ecotners, a line of shades available to color all Sherwin-Williams latex and water-based coatings. According to the company, unlike most traditional colorings (which frequently add VOCs to finished products), ColorCast Ecotners has zero VOCs, maintains paint thickness after coloring, and produces rich coats with a full line of vibrant colors. Sherwin Williams Colorcast Eco Toner Green technology is a hallmark of Sherwin Williams products, and we are working to drive progress in delivering better home painted products to consumers, says Carl Schmidt, Vice President of Marketing Research and Design. A team of designer stylists has teamed up with a pottery barn for a new spring collaboration, Emily & Merrit for Pottery Barn, released today. The thoughtfully curated collection captures the duo's signature whimsy and expressive eyes for design through bunny motifs, statement brass accents, classic stripes and floral decorations. More than 20 pieces are featured in the new collaboration, including bedding, dining & tabletops, decorations, accessories and furniture. We were so excited to design a collection, spring funny stories and bedrooms that nod to classic American glamour, with nostalgic florals and embroidery, vintage brass, whimsical, touch of edge, the duo explains. Emily and Merritt, who previously worked with pottery barns on the teenage and nursery lines, extend their free-willing approach to timeless staples and playful eclectic design. Inspired by traditional spring icons and creatures, our tablescape is a mash-up of sweet charm, humor and new takes on nostalgic traditions ranging from bunny serving boards to brass baskets.
